Establishing a Climate-Forward Clean Energy Industrial Partnership

Brazil and the United States share the goal of creating more competitive, clean, fair, and resilient economies by promoting the clean energy transition in a way that fosters economic growth and the generation of high-quality jobs, while reducing emissions and keeping our 1.5°C goals within reach, consistent with the Paris Agreement. Along with other domestic priorities, these objectives align with the following public policy agendas in both countries:

Brazil and the United States have immense potential to lead the global energy transition on some of its most promising fronts. This new partnership presents a strategic opportunity to strengthen bilateral cooperation on clean industrial development, leveraging complementarities across both our public and private sectors. The two sides announce their intent, in particular, to focus coordination across three pillars:

Through this partnership, announced by Presidents Lula and Biden, Brazil and the United States intend to mobilize all relevant government agencies in our countries to shape and accelerate just and inclusive energy transitions and provide the needed signals for public and private sector stakeholders to fully participate in this effort.
