An island nation in the Caribbean is called Saint Vincent and the Grenadines.

It may be found in the southeast Windward Islands of the Lesser Antilles, which are part of the West Indies, near the southernmost point of the Caribbean Sea's eastern boundary, where the Caribbean Sea meets the Atlantic Ocean.

Saint Vincent, the largest island in its 369 km² (142 sq mi) of area, and two-thirds of the northern Grenadines, a group of 32 smaller islands, are located south of Saint Vincent.

There are some inhabited Grenadines, such as Bequia, Mustique, Union Island, Canouan, Petit Saint Vincent, Palm Island, Mayreau, and Young Island; however, there are also uninhabited ones, including Tobago Cays, Baliceaux, Battowia, Quatre, Petit Mustique, Savan, and Petit Nevis.
