By Brock McKeel, Senior Vice President, Site Experience, Walmart eCommerce

As many of us start preparing to welcome friends and family members into our homes for the holidays, Walmart is taking the same actions to get our "house" ready for holiday shopping. We're pulling out all the stops for our customers on Walmart , ensuring that they have fast, frictionless, engaging and personalized shopping experiences that save them time, save them money and make shopping on our site just as easy as shopping in one of our stores.

We've been hard at work over the past year to enhance our site and add new features that improve and personalize the shopping experience on Walmart and on our app. Today, we're excited to announce even more enhancements, just in time for the most wonderful time of the year.

During the hustle and bustle of the holiday season, we know that time is incredibly valuable and we want to simplify the shopping process as much as possible, so our customers can spend their time where it really matters.

We know our customers come to us for value and that it's more important than ever during the holiday season. In a recent survey, seventy-eight percent of customers said inflation will have some or a great deal of impact on their holiday shopping. And with customers shopping for the holidays earlier than ever this year, we've been working hard to make sure the site experience makes it easy for them to find great deals, whether they're checking items off their holiday or grocery lists.

So that customers can easily and quickly identify which items are on sale and what the discounted price is, we're marking savings throughout our site with a green price tag. And this is only the beginning! As we begin to showcase the amazing deals our customer can find at Walmart this holiday season, we will maximize customer exposure to those deals throughout multiple touchpoints in the customer journey from the homepage all the way through the order confirmation page.

Finding the perfect gift can be stressful and we want to make sure customers can gift with confidence. From introducing a new technology that enables customers to virtually view items in their homes to offering recommendations for the perfect top to go with a pair of pants, we're taking the guesswork out of gifting.
