Since 2007, Lockheed Martin has invested in over 35 companies globally. The company also has many subsidiaries: AWE Management, Zeta Associates, and Helicopter Support are three subsidiaries of Lockheed Martin.

Lockheed Martin is a defense company; its biggest customer is the U.S. military. It is a major competitor in the aeronautics, defense, energy, and telecommunications sectors, and its main competitors are other domestic (and foreign) aerospace and defense companies. Boeing Company, General Dynamics Corporation, and RTX Corporation are three of Lockheed Martin's competitors.

Sikorsky Aircraft is an American aircraft manufacturer. It was acquired by Lockheed Martin in 2015 and helped the company expand into rotary-wing aircraft manufacturing for military and commercial customers. Prior to the acquisition, Sikorsky and Lockheed Martin already partnered on the production of several different aircraft: the VH-92 Presidential Helicopter, Combat Rescue Helicopter, and the Naval MH-60 Helicopter.

Lockheed Martin is a publicly traded company. It trades on the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE) under the ticker symbol LMT. You can purchase shares of the company online or through a broker. You can also invest in mutual funds that have Lockheed Martin in their profile. There are also different exchange-traded funds (ETFs) that you can invest in to give you exposure to the company. Keep in mind that the aerospace, defense, and security industries are considered complex and come with significant risks, so you should do your research and due diligence before making an investment.
